throughout Europe were clearly re-acted on all the lines of official conduct, completely demoralized and suffered enormous clumps in all their stocks except the prevailing opinion that Russia would find herself unable to accept the terms of the Austria-Hungarian ultimatum.

RUSSIA STAYS IN SERVICE.
During the evening, however, hope began to arise when it was freely reported in European capitals that Russia had agreed to compliance to the ultimatum.

The hope soon began to fall again, however, on the basis of official contradiction of this report, and shortly all Europe was plunged into the gloomiest of depression, when the official message came from Vienna stating that the Serbian note of reply, which was handed to the Austria-Hungarian Minister in Belgrade, was found to be unsatisfactory, practically a rejection of Austria's terms, and in consequence this Minister, accompanied by the full staff, had left Belgrade.

"This action means the breaking off of all diplomatic relations between the two countries, and, in consequence, it is believed, but not ready war," says the Vienna correspondent. The Austrian diplomats endeavored frantically to induce Austria-Hungary to extend the time limit in which the reply might be made, but the latter would not deign to consider the proposition, whereupon, as a last resource, Russia again declared that it would stand by her ally, Serbia, at all costs, to appeal to France.

This declaration precipitated the crisis already mentioned, and Germany immediately announced that if any third party interfered she was prepared to assist Austria-Hungary. Russia, as a counter move, will now appeal to France for help. Reports from all capitals indicate that talks of warlike preparations underway.

KING PETER AND HIS COURT FLEE CAPITAL ARMY IS MOBILIZED.
BELGRADE, July 25.—King Peter, accompanied by the members of his court, left Belgrade early this morning and retired to the southeast. The whole Serbian army a few hours later commenced a hurried mobilization which was well under way before the Serbian Government delivered its unsatisfactory note to the Austrian Minister. Immediately after the delivery of this note the Serbian Government, with its exchequer, left the capital.

Several banks also have been transferred to Krakrajeva, a large town sixty miles to the south of Belgrade. The Serbian do not intend to defend their capital, from which the Serbian has already been driven. The population, however, are parading the streets, defiantly facing Austria-Hungary and threatening to fight. The country seems to be unanimous for war.

BERLIN PARADED BY TUMULTUOUS CROWDS SHOOTING FOR WAR.
BERLIN, July 25.—The streets of Berlin are filled tonight with the tumultuous crowds, including in some towns enthusiastic demonstrations among the excited crowds of Austria-Hungarian soldiers.

AUSTRIA SEIZES

CHIEF OF STAFF OF THE SERBIAN ARMY

BELGRADE, July 25.—General Putnik, chief of staff of the Serbian army, was arrested tonight by Austrian military authorities while he was on his way to Belgrade from the town of Styria, in Austria, according to reports received here.

BULGARIA NEUTRAL, BUT IS ANXIOUSLY WATCHING EVENTS

SOFIA, July 25.—Serbia's announcement of her policy in awaited impatience. The cabinet meeting decided the situation. Bulgaria's attitude is neutral, but events will be awaited with anxiety as to how they may affect Bulgaria's interests.

GENERAL WAR MIGHT INVOLVE GRAND TOTAL OF 6,000,000 MEN

Six million men are available for war in the event the crisis between Serbia and Austria-Hungary should involve all Europe.

Austria, large as it is, in territory and population, has not a number Serbia in available trained men so heavily as might be expected. The army of Austria-Hungary is in the fact that the two principal powers in general war might be inevitable.

Should Russia make good her threat to aid Serbia, it is believed that Austria-Hungary would join their ally, Austria.

In such a case, it is assumed that Austria, large as it is, in territory and population, has not a number Serbia in available trained men so heavily as might be expected.

Employe of Childs Frick Kills Self

Ex-African Chief Hanged Self in PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 25.—Bitterly disappointed because no arrangement had been made to take him to New York where he hoped to see his employer, Kitt Zitt, a purchased slave, and at one time a chief of a tribe in Africa, hanged himself today in the home of Childs Frick of Bryn Mawr, the wealthy young Philadelphia banker, who had been a devoted devotee of the African to Mr. Frick, who saved his life from a lion while he was on a hunting trip in Africa.

Two men, and a woman were killed tonight by a train on the Concord division of the Boston & Maine Railroad, the Amoskilling station. The bodies had not been identified at a late hour, but it was believed they were members of a camping party. Details of the accident were lacking.

MANCHESTER, N. H., July 25.—Two men and a woman were killed tonight by a train on the Concord division of the Boston & Maine Railroad, the Amoskilling station. The bodies had not been identified at a late hour, but it was believed they were members of a camping party. Details of the accident were lacking.

Police Seize Beer for Christening

Antonia Russel, of No. 25 Arsenal street, Watertown, is to have a christening at her home tonight. It is believed that the police seized three barrels of beer in the Watertown freight station last night, and that the police seized three barrels of beer in the Watertown freight station last night, and that the police seized three barrels of beer in the Watertown freight station last night.

Hetty Green on First Vacation in Years

NEW YORK, July 25.—Mrs. Hetty Green is taking her first vacation in six years. The greatest fortune teller in the world of finance closed her own house at No. 1 West Street last Monday and departed for Valley Park, N. Y., to remain three weeks on her farm. Her son, Colonel Edward Green, is in charge of her business affairs in her absence.

Army numbers 1,254,000 men of all arms, distributed over her European and African possessions. It is believed that these would not be available for use in an European war. But military experts concede that Russia could hold a great army of 1,500,000 men across the German and Austrian borders, these men comprising the regular European army and the reserve forces. Behind them, in turn, are several millions of trained and partly trained men.

France, too, would be an effective ally of the Serbians on land. The active army within continental France is thought to number about 300,000 men, and the outbreak of war would mean the instant increase of the field army to a strength of 1,300,000, which might be still further increased by the recall of troops from Algeria and drafts from 700,000 trained reservists of the second line.

On a peace basis the Italian army could be slightly more than 300,000 men. The field army in time of war would number nearly 500,000 men, and could be raised from drafts from the mobilized militia to 800,000. Behind these troops stand the territorial militia, more than 2,000,000 men.

England is not expected to account for much in military operations on her land. Her allies would expect her to furnish or supply the German fleet, and then lead her naval aid to France in wading out the Austrian and Italian squadrons in the Mediterranean and Adriatic.

peace footing the Russian

As Austria must guard the Russian frontier and leave some troops to guard her rear, it is believed that the Russian army might attempt to throw across the Danube into Serbia, would not be of overwhelming strength. Then, too, the Serbian army is largely composed of veterans, and the order of first rate achievement in the Balkan wars.

Germany's field army in time of war numbers 1,250,000 men and her entire system of mobilization and strategy is based upon an invasion of France and a simultaneous resistance to a Russian attack upon her back door. Behind this field army stand an active reserve of 800,000 men of the Landwehr and behind them still a second reserve of 1,000,000 men.

Congress Facing Dilemma, Result of Blindly Passing a Hybrid Bank Act—Hearst

WASHINGTON, July 25.—The Washington Post today publishes the following letter from William Randolph Hearst:

To the Editor of the Washington Post:

Dear Sir—The appointment of Mr. Jones and Mr. Warburg of New York by President Wilson for positions on the Federal Reserve Board has proven unsatisfactory to Congress.

This situation is not wholly the fault of Mr. Warburg and of Mr. Jones, or indeed, of Mr. Wilson. It is very largely the fault of Congress itself.

Congress is beginning to meet with the difficulties and dilemmas resulting from the blind following of a purblind leader.

Congress is now encountering the complications due to the hasty adoption, at a modified Aldrich bank trust measure, of a bastard banking act, a modified Aldrich bank trust measure.

Instead of the hybrid measure framed originally by Senator Aldrich and remodelled by President Wilson, Congress would not have had the peculiar difficulty of trying to reconcile the irreconcilable, of trying to harmonize the interests of the banking trust and the interests of the public.

The Aldrich-Wilson measure takes thought chiefly of the interests of the bankers and requires the appointment of banking representatives to look carefully after these financial interests.

The Wilson appointments under the provisions of the Aldrich-Wilson act were about what might be expected, and were sufficiently well adapted to the carrying out of the spirit of the measure.

Mr. Warburg and Mr. Jones are very notable men of their kind, very distinguished men of their class and calling. They are very important figures in their banking circles. They are leading spirits in the financial field and able representatives of the financial interests.

They are intimately associated with and thoroughly familiar with all sorts of great trusts, railroads and moneyed institutions. They are exceptionally capable of caring for the interests of these moneyed enterprises and of conducting the banking system of the country exactly as the bankers want it conducted.

It is for that reason that they were appointed; it is apparently for the purpose of securing such appointments and such results that the Aldrich-Wilson bill was framed and passed.

Certainly Mr. Wilson knew what kind of a bill he wanted and what kind of appointments he intended to make. Seemingly, however, Congress does not know as definitely what it wants or what it intends to do.

Obviously enough, if Congress wanted the Aldrich-Wilson bill, then it ought to want this kind of appointments.

And on the other hand, if it does not want this kind of appointments, then it ought not to have passed the Aldrich-Wilson bill.

The AMERICAN said at the time that this bill was under consideration that the country would never be satisfied with a merely modified, and not much modified, version of the Aldrich bill.

There is nothing more unumbrable than radical and reactionary policies.

There is some virtue in unalloyed conservatism. There is much value in genuine radicalism. But radicalism compounded with conservatism, or conservatism compounded with radicalism, is merely an adulteration, an impure product which is worthless.

Vegetables and flowers are good delectable in their proper places, but mixed up together they do not make either an acceptable bouquet or an agreeable stew.

But Congress has done what it desired a reactionary measure they should have adopted the Aldrich bill as Aldrich prepared it.

If they had desired a progressive measure they should have adopted the central bank plan which the progressive sentiment of the country had always supported, which the Independence party had declared for in its platform, and which in some form or other has long been in successful operation in more genuinely progressive countries than our own.

But Congress, without the common sense to be radical or the courage to be reactionary, adopted a mixed and mongrel measure—a half-bred proposal; half-Republican, half-Democratic; half-reactionary, half-radical; half in the interests of the Banking Trust and half in the interests of the public.

Congress is encountering the resultant difficulties, and is now learning what it should have known, that there is only one way to serve the public, and that that is unreservedly to serve the public; there is only one way to be radical, and that it is to be wholeheartedly radical; there is only one way to be Democratic, and that is to be genuinely Democratic.

Congress is now learning from that hard teacher, experience, the truth of Samuel J. Tilden's statement that the Democratic party would succeed only when it had the courage to be Democratic.

Congress is also learning, and will learn better after the next election, that to follow the Wilson program is not necessarily or ordinarily to be either Democratic or popular or practical.

Mr. Wilson appealed to the Democrats in Congress to follow him wherever he might lead as an evidence of party loyalty. But how could these Democrats exhibit party loyalty by following a man who is himself disloyal to the party?

Mr. Wilson has been absolutely faithless to the party platform and has defied nearly every declaration contained in it.

Mr. Wilson has been faithless to the Democratic principles and to established Democratic precedents.

How can any man who has departed diametrically from the chartered course of Democracy ask other men to follow him because of Democratic loyalty?

What Mr. Wilson means is that Congress should follow him, not because of party loyalty, but because of personal loyalty, because of pap and patronage loyalty.

But what the Democrats in Congress must do is to follow the declarations of their platform, the recognized principles of their party, the illustrious examples of great Democrats. They must do this conscientiously and consistently, and not only because of party loyalty, but because of patriotic loyalty.

For Mr. Wilson, if he is not a Democrat, never has been a Democrat, and never will be a Democrat.

He is an autocrat, both by natural impulse and by pedagogic experience.

His policy is not democracy. It is a motley of federalism, paternalism and despotism, aggravated by egotism.

He is the Pied Piper of Politics, and the innocents who follow him will return to Scrooge.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Maid Found Hanging in Home at Quincy

Letter Left by Suicide May Explain Cause of Melancholia.

The police are seeking the relatives of the Miss M., a maid in the home of Louis J. John of No. 167 Norfolk street, Wollaston, who committed suicide by hanging yesterday.

Miss John said: "She was twenty-five years old and has been in my employ for about six months. She was sent to us by Father P. Dillia, pastor of the Italian church, Harris avenue. Her uncle and aunt lived on Carver street, months ago in Roxbury or Dorchester a few months ago."

Nobody on Carver street remembered any girl by the name of Miss M. Medical Examiner Jones said: "The girl's death was due to suicide by hanging caused by melancholia."

The cause of the girl's sorrow is unknown. It is expected that a letter written in Italian and left on Carver street may clear this up.

GUILD FLAYS OPPOSITION TO HUB DRYDOCK

"Humiliating to Think Political Influence Could Interfere," Writes Ex-Senator.

Curtis Guild's Commonwealth Bulletin is out this week with a severe castigation on "Port Development and Politics" in which some pointed questions are put to those who are holding up the building of the Boston Dry Dock at South Boston. Says the editorial:

Objections to a big dry dock at Boston which may have seemed convincing a few years ago will no longer bear analysis.

What is the real reason for the opposition? Come, gentlemen, out with it. Are you honestly opposed to any dry dock, or is your real purpose to have the work done by the State itself rather than by private contractors?

It is humiliating to think that political influence could so seriously interfere with the plan which has been adopted by the city and which has received the qualified endorsement of all who have most at stake in the outcome of the effort.

TAKE TICKLED BY KELHER PLEA FOR 5TH PIECE OF PIE

Charleston Man Comments on John A.'s Affliction of "Comebackitis."

Representative Peter Taggart, of Charleston, one of the aspirants for the Congressional nomination in the Tenth District, was asked yesterday if he had any comment to offer on the speech the night before by former Congressman John A. Kelher at the New Marlborough Hotel.

Mr. Taggart said: "When we get out on the stump, a little later, it will be time enough to answer Mr. Kelher's speech. If he is still making them at that time, I am one of many thousands of Democrats in the Tenth District who can not take the Kelherian candidacy seriously. Mr. Kelher appears to have been bitten by the well-known bug, comebackitis, along with his good friend, Mr. Charles W. Taggart."

Mr. Taggart said: "When we get out on the stump, a little later, it will be time enough to

RAVEN SUIT IS ATTACKED BY SENATOR WEEKS

Action Is Nothing Less Than a Crime Against New England, He Says.

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Senator Weeks of Massachusetts, in the Senate today denounced the proposed solution of the New Haven system while speaking in opposition to the Federal Trade Commission bill. Any attempt to dismember this great network of railroads, he declared, "is nothing less than a crime against the New England States, as well as against the railroad companies themselves."

He predicted that the government would fail in its effort to divorce the New Haven from the Boston & Maine, and that the latter would then solve the great railroad system of New England from which they have built up an empire.

MANY OTHER COMBINATIONS.
The New Haven suit, the Senator said, was a "bad precedent" and apparently not because the law has been violated, but because in the opinion of those in authority it would be a precedent for other combinations. "If we had an agreement in this case," he said, "it would be all right if we had an agreement in all other cases."

He said that the government would fail in its effort to divorce the New Haven from the Boston & Maine, and that the latter would then solve the great railroad system of New England from which they have built up an empire.

Senator Weeks of Nevada, commenting on the attempt to break up the New Haven system, said that he would not support the bill. "The Senate," he said, "is not a court of law, and it is not its duty to pass upon the merits of a case."

Best Stories And Poor Mutt Only Got Ten Days

Unsanctified Vocabulary.

A BIRDDEALER had in his shop a beautiful parrot. After eight days it sat silent on its perch, indifferent to every question. At last a Cuban lady came into the shop and spoke to it in her native tongue. The parrot brightened up at once, opened its beak, and emitted a loud, lusty volley of vehement Spanish words. When the parrot finally ceased speaking, the lady turned to the dealer and, blushing violently, asked: "Do you understand Spanish?" "No," he replied. "Thank heaven," she said, and left the shop.

His Duty.

A WIND was blowing the sand about down at the manœuvre camp at Texas City, and a good deal of it found its way into one of the kitchens. Of course, some got into the food. A lieutenant, inspecting during the mess hour, heard one man grum bling. "Did you enter the army to serve your country or to grumble?" he demanded sternly. The man stood up, saluted, and replied: "I enlisted to serve my country sir, but not to eat it."

A Puzzler.

AN American woman made the ascent of Vesuvius recently with a small party, which included Mrs. Cook, widow of the famous tourist manager. The display within the crater was unusually fine, which the American at dinner smilingly attributed to the presence of Mrs. Cook. After several moments of silence, the Englishman exclaimed to one of the party: "But how could they manage that?"

Retort Courteous.

THE usual large crowd gathered at the New York end of the Brooklyn Bridge waiting for trolley cars. An elderly lady, red in the face, flustered and fussy, dug her elbows into convenient ribs irrespective of owners.

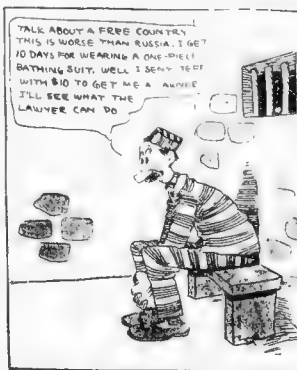

A fat man on her left was the recipient of a particularly vicious jab. She yelled at him, "Say!" He winced slightly and moved to one side. She, too, sidestepped and thumped him vigorously on the back. "Say!" she persisted, "does it make any difference with these cars I take to Greenwood Cemetery?" "Not to me, madam," he answered, slipping through the opening in the crowd.

Had Been Looking.

"MOTHER," said Bobby, after a full week of observation, "have I been a good boy lately?" "As dear," replied his mother, "a very, very good boy." "And do you trust me?" he continued. "Why, of course, mother trusts her little boy," she answered. But the chastened child was not pacified. "I mean really, really?" "Just me, you know," he explained. "Yes, I really, really trust you," nodded his mother. "Why do you ask?" "Just because," said Bobby, diving his hands into his pockets and looking her in the face. "If you trust me like you say you do, why do you go on hiding the jam?"

She Found It.

SHE was in the habit of cleaning her front doorstep on Saturday night in order to avoid the necessity of Sunday labor, and was so engaged on one occasion when she was alarmed by the squeaking of a rat. She bent a hasty retreat into the house, but, emboldened by a little family counsel and armed with a brush, she returned to the doorstep to effect the rodent. Several turns blew, in the darkness at the doorstep had to slay beyond bringing a few more squeaks from the invisible rat. A kindly passer-by offered his aid, on learning the cause of the trouble, but his efforts with the brush were no more effective than the female's. The rat would not be killed, nor would it go away. It would do nothing but squeak, and at last the effort was given up. Next morning the lady's neighbor, addressing her over the backyard fence, said: "Mrs., did you find an India-rubber doll in front of your house last night?" My children lost one.

How It Felt.

AN Irish maid in the service of a Washington family recently sought permission of her mistress to take an afternoon off for the purpose of consulting a dentist. Upon her return the mistress said: "Well, Rosalie, did you have the tooth filled?" "I did, mum." "And what did the dentist fill it with—gold or amalgam?" "I don't know just what it was, mum; but from the way it felt I should think it was thunder and lightning, mum."

When We Get That Ice Cream Coney Feeling

By J. Willard Connelly.

AT least once every summer some slight acquaintance wants us to organize secretly a little party to Coney Island, doesn't she? And she always says she hopes none of our friends will see us there, and if father and mother ever find out they'll go wild. (Probably you see father and mother at Coney as soon as you get there.) Unlike the Metropolitan Museum and the Metropolitan Tower and the Aquarium, etc., Coney Island is known to have been visited by New Yorkers.

We thought we'd go there on the surface car of a Sunday morning. It would be nice and cool to sit on the front seat with the motorist, so he could answer questions about Brooklyn. That is, those that were answerable.

Over eleven cars rounded the turn at the entrance of Brooklyn Bridge before the conductor of one admitted that his car went to Coney. Only an A. W. orator with red nose and hair could have gathered on a convention as had waited for that car.

A Coney Island trolley is certainly the greatest of its kind. It has even known. The way those people were ducked, and then the Johnson Flood resemble the historic January mists. It is a very molasses kind of a Sunday, too.

There were frowning husbands with grinning fat faces, little girls squealing and little boys squalling, and blinking baby wonderings what the argument was. And everywhere was lunch, lunch, lunch and high time some of it was eaten.

We observed the little girls and thought, "After all, what is Sunday without a pink dress? Be it ever so pink, there is no color like pink in their starched raiment, and watching their Sunday shoes, squeaky and painful.

The car jounced along, rocking horse fashion, never stopping except at each street corner for breath, and then when the poor old trolley wheel would just collapse and fly off the overhead wire.

Then the nighty conductor, straining every nerve as if hauling in a frisky colt, would put the trolley on the job again, and lead cheers from the slaphop knees of a shaven cotillion.

Our arrival at Coney Island was greeted by a chorus of one hundred all singing something different to begin with, but invariably ending with the immortal word "Coney." You have indeed a thin time at the island unless you pay a dime to a dime to appease the sufferer.

Hereditarily. CALLER—How Willie take after his father? Mother—Yes! His only a year old and he's unhappy without a bottle, and keeps me up every night.

Prophetic. LITTLE HUSBAND—Did I tell you if I weren't here, Silver-Yee, insolent boy? Go away this very minute!

Would Have Been Tough. REMARK—Isn't it wonderful how prolific some of the old novelists were when it is taken into consideration that they had to do all their composition with pen and ink? Thornton—Yes; I shudder to think of what they might have turned out if they could have had the advantage of typewriters.

On a Pinch. VIRTUOSO (rattling Belfast stout with evident appreciation) Really, this is splendid stuff! They say that it is both meat and drink. Workman (interrupting)—Sure, it's right, ye are, sir; and if ye take plenty as it'll find ye looking, too.

Most of 'Em Do. HUGGINS—What has become of Fanning? MUGGINS—Oh, he's laid up—a victim of baseball. Huggins—I didn't know he ever played the game. Muggins—He doesn't. He upraised his laxness, telling the umpire how things ought to be done.

And Then Some. "WHERES," said the lead agent, addressing an audience of possible purchasers, "where else on the face of the globe will you find in one place copper, tin, iron, cotton, hemp, grain, game, and a voice from the crowd?" "In the pocket of my youngest son."

Never'll Find Out.

PROFESSOR—You say you are engaged in some—original research. Upon what subject?

SEPHOREM—I am trying to discover why the ink won't flow from my fountain pen unless I place it in an upright position in the pocket of a light fancy vest.

Would Serve Him Right.

LITTLE ARCHIE—Oh, pa, I swallowed a worm! Anxious Father—Take a drink, quick, and wash it down! Little Archie—Aw, let him walk. Percy—My father occupies the chair of applied physics at 'Amvud. Chimble—Ches, dat's nuttin'. Me brudder occupied de chair of applied electricity at Sing Sing.

Ought to Mend His Ways. FIRST STUDENT—Can you resent these trousers for me? Second Tutor—Yes, but I'd rather receipt your bill.

The Malcontent. JONES has a motor, but I know it breaks down when it's needed. Smith has a lawn—no worries, though. Because it's just been seeded. Brown has a store that fills a block. And fills his brow with wrinkles. Flynn, the old graffer, gets a shock. Each time the phone bell rings.

Green has a bank and sinks in gloom. At just the name of panic. While I, who have a furnished room. Look on with glee static.

I have no riches to annoy. I have no business to fret. And yet I miss life's greatest joy—I haven't any worries.

Sh! HOW do you pronounce eucalyptus? Associate—With a sigh, I should say.

The Usefulness of the Law.

"WHAT'S the matter, constable?" asked the old lawyer. "We've got to arrest somebody quick," cried "Cousin" Billy. "We've got three students at the law school, and they want a fourth to make a rubber at trial."

In Moral Ideas and Practice.

PROF. What would you suggest to put a stop to the lamentably crowded condition of the saloons on Saturday night?

Student—Lengthen the bars.

Confession. "WHAT did you get on your trip?" "A lion fifteen feet long. Some 'bits,' oh."

All Those in Favor. "THERE is a motion before the house, to quash Herod, as Salome unfurled the bloody draperies."

Business. "WHAT is it they doing here in the Methu dist church?" "Oh, the minister owes him $20 and he's taking it out in trade."

Easy. SHE—How did you find your chop? Steve—Looked under the pen.

Precaution. MIKE—Begorra, an' I had to go through the woods the other night where Casey was murdered last fall, an' that they say is haunted, an' bedad, I walked around the whole way.

Pat—An' what for was ye after that? Mike—Parth, man, was I could see if any thing was comin' up behind me.

Time Discount.

"MY child," her father's voice was stern. "You now must tell me true."

"What time did the Student go away? Who last night called on you?"

Said she: "Oh, Father, dear, the truth I'm quite prepared to state. John—Mr. Williams—went away before a quarter of eight."

Her father turned away, she smiled. Her dimples deeper grew— "It wasn't wrong to tell him that. For a quarter of eight is two."

The Old Trouble. "REALLY," said Horatia to his companion, "something should be done to relieve the bridge crush." Whereupon they saw three more of Tarquin's men and considerably reduced the congestion.

Stuck In. THERE was a student called W. Who in chapel said down with a yip. But he rose with a yell. That they heard down in Patton. For he'd sat on the point of a yip.

Hereditarily. CALLER—How Willie take after his father? Mother—Yes! His only a year old and he's unhappy without a bottle, and keeps me up every night.

Prophetic. LITTLE HUSBAND—Did I tell you if I weren't here, Silver-Yee, insolent boy? Go away this very minute!

LEWIS' TRIPLE IN THE NINTH SCORES THREE AND TIES NAPS

Cleveland Swept Off Its Feet By Furious Attack at the Finish.

CLEVELAND, July 25.—Although the Naps were staked to a four-run lead in the first inning today, they could not stand prosperity and lost to the Red Sox, 8 to 6, in eleven innings. The Red Sox tied the score in the ninth by scoring three runs, Duffy Lewis cracking out a triple with the bases full.

It was Duffy's fourth hit off the Naps' star southpaw, and it certainly was a money-getting swat. Everett Scott also touched Gregg up for four bingles, and they helped the Boston cause not a little. Incidentally, it was Boston's ninth straight victory over the tail-enders.

Dutch Leonard, the league's leading pitcher, started on the firing line for Boston, but after those four runs came across he gave way to young Combe, who did excellent work for seven innings, giving way to a punch hitter. Collins finished in sweet style.

The Cleveland pitcher, who had been in the game since the first inning, was relieved by Combe in the fourth. Combe pitched well, but he was not able to keep the Naps' bats from doing their worst. In the fifth inning, Combe was relieved by Leonard, who pitched the sixth and seventh innings. Leonard was relieved by Collins in the eighth and ninth innings.

The Sox' lead was extended in the first of the last world's series to get a rare blow, as he bats from his post with three hits in a straight, and the Sox' lead was extended to four runs. In the fifth inning, Combe was relieved by Leonard, who pitched the sixth and seventh innings. Leonard was relieved by Collins in the eighth and ninth innings.

Bennetts Again Beat Lincolns

The Bennett "A" defeated the Lincoln club in an exciting game at Lincoln Park, Somerville, yesterday. The score was 8 to 2. It was the second victory for the Bennett over the Lincoln in the Bennett-Lincoln League series. The score was 8 to 2.

GREATEST CROWD IN YEARS SEES CLOSE SOUTH END GAME

Battle Is Nip and Tuck to the Finish—Cubs Lucky to Win.

By NICK FLATLEY.
Back in the early thirties Tommy Leach started playing the league ball with Lou White. If you were right on down the line yesterday in the ninth inning, you would have seen Lou White, a big, powerful, wild-eyed fellow, swinging a bat, and a crowd of 16,000 people watching him swing. When all this happened the score was 5 to 4 in favor of the Cubs, both teams were fighting tooth and nail, and the hostile pitcher laugh was clinging to the ropes. A constant howl that could be heard up around the top of the stands was the cry of the "Cubs are going to win!"

When the game was over, the crowd was still there, and one of the best ball games of the season was over. The Cubs won the game 5 to 4. The game was a close one, and the crowd was the largest in years.

Great Crowd Saw Thrilling Battle.

IT IS ALMOST AS PROFITABLE TO PUT MONEY IN A NEW ENGLAND CUP YACHT AS IN A NEW ENGLAND RAILROAD

NEW ENGLAND YACHTSMEN STIRRED TO PROTEST BY DEFIANCER WITHDRAWAL

Boston Backers of Cup Defence Craft Stand to Lose $150,000—Designer Owen Declares Yacht Is All Right—Owners Refuse to Reconsider Determination to Send Racer to Junk Heap.

By H. B. SCHULTZ.

The withdrawal of the New England yacht Defiance from the battle for honor of defending the America Cup against Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock IV, has raised a controversy of international interest. Today the whys and wherefores of the Defiance quitting the race is the big topic of discussion in the yachting world.

On both sides of the ocean the interest is at flood tide. In some quarters a storm of protest has taken form in the question:

"Couldn't the Defiance gamely stick it out to the end in the contest with the Resolute and Yantic?"

George Owen of Newton, who designed the Defiance, says it could.

George M. Pynchon, managing director of the Tri-City Syndicate, owners of the yacht, says it couldn't.

Backers Will Lose About $150,000

And the backers of the Defiance—the men who dug into their pockets and contributed $200,000 to build and finance the craft—simply say that they are "game losers" and won't do any crying over spilled milk.

Yachting circles agree that it is a matter for long regret that the costly mahogany racer has been given the count of ten, and is now fated for the junk heap.

This means that the backers will lose somewhere around $150,000 at one fell swoop.

Of this sum, according to statements made last night, about a half probably more will be lost by the New England millionaires who helped in the financing of the yacht. The majority of the backers are Boston and New England men.

Many say that the Defiance has not been given a sufficient tryout to justify her owners' decision to relegate her to the junk heap. The critics have come forward with the suggestion that the competing yachts in the controversy get together for harmony and reconsider the withdrawal.

"America's Sportsmanlike demands it," they declare.

Owen Declares the Yacht's All Right.

Meanwhile the once doggedly Defiant, which once looked as if it might pull through, in the cup of glory, has been reduced to a mere wreck, and the men who built it are left with a pile of lumber and a few scraps of metal.

It is a sad story, and one which has been told many times before. But the Defiance is a unique craft, and its withdrawal from the race is a blow to the yachting world.

BROOKES IS A DANGEROUS PROPOSITION IN PLAY FOR DAVIS CUP, SAYS CAMP

Australian Star is Preparing Himself for the Fight of His Life in the Coming Matches, Says Walter Camp.

Brookes has the Coolest and Most Calculating Disposition of Any Man on Courts Today, Declares Noted Expert.

Walter Camp.

Campisms

Many a coach talks to show all he knows instead of to tell the player what he should do.

In golf, you often wish there to the green and three, made five, and some count it that way.

The man who offers to play Auction for a dollar a point has either too much money or too little. In either case don't play with him.

The honest live down anything except a reputation as a quitter.

In all summer sports there is a shady porch and an easy chair for the big strapping first baseman when he calls while the game is in progress. He sits there, shaded more, has to stand out in the sun and sweat his chance.

Written Expressly for the Boston Sunday American.

By WALTER CAMP.

When, last week, this column raised the question of America's chances of retaining possession of the Davis Cup, which represents the world's championship in tennis, some idea of the difficulties attending the situation were presented, but there is more to be said on this subject.

Several weeks ago attention was called to the fact that Brookes, the Australian player, who, in spite of his good game, was regarded as second to Wilding, had taken the tennis question very seriously this year and was preparing himself for the fight of his life.

PLAYING THE GAME OF HIS LIFE

To those of us who saw him play on the court at Wimbledon in the broiling hot sun—those grueling matches which finally brought him through as the victor—Brookes, the giant of the man as a player can well be appreciated, but those who did not see him play in the sun and sweat in this country, at his defeat of his former comrade, Wilding.

Brookes is now playing the tennis game of his life. He has the most calculating disposition of any man on the courts today and is perfectly satisfied of any man he can defeat. He is a man who has the most calculating disposition of any man on the courts today and is perfectly satisfied of any man he can defeat.

As for Kingdome and Barrett, the former of them made a favorable impression as internationalists at Wimbledon. Barrett, the American, was surprised, especially in this country, at his defeat of his former comrade, Wilding.

WORCESTER AND LAWRENCE DIVIDE

Jesse Burkett's Crew Takes Second, 2-1, in Ninth, After Losing First Game, 5-3.

WORCESTER, July 25.—Lawrence and Worcester split even in a double-header exhibition at Housatonic Park today, the visitors taking the first game by a batting rally in the fifth, 5 to 3, the second going to Jesse Burkett's aggregation in the seventh, a long drive into left garden for a double sending in the necessary run for a 2-1 victory.

The local batsmen scored in the opening session of the two games and managed to hold the Lawrence side until the seventh, when they tied the Worcesterites, but only for half an inning. Burkett's double with one out sending scores across the plate.

Weird Visions of Poe by A New Beardsley

ENGLAND has produced a remarkable new decorative artist in Henry Malcolm Thurburn, who rivals the lamented Aubrey Beardsley in the weirdness and imaginative qualities of his work, without being in any sense an imitator.

Thurburn has made a striking series of drawings illustrating Edgar Allan Poe's "Tales of Mystery and Imagination," showing a power to suggest mystery, strangeness and beauty that is singularly in harmony with the genius of the great American writer.

The artist shows a curious resemblance to Aubrey Beardsley in a purely personal way. Like Beardsley, he comes from a highly respectable English family, and, like him, he has utterly revolted against the artistic convention.

Thurburn is the son of an English banker, Robert Augustus Thurburn, of Buenos Ayres. He is now twenty-six years old, and 5 feet 2 inches high. From his childhood he shocked his family and friends by making fantastic drawings in which his visions of Heaven and the nether regions predominated. His father sent him home to England to be educated properly. He returned to Buenos Ayres and tried architecture, which he did not like. Then he tried his father's business and liked it still less.

Finally he went to Paris to study art. He worked four years at Julian's famous studio and afterward with Tudor Hart. While in Paris he began to make illustrations of Poe's tales, and exhibited a number of them, executed in black and gold, at the Salon, where they attracted considerable attention.

Thurburn then tried to induce a London publisher to bring out his work in book form, but without success. This experience strengthened his dislike for England, and he has never been there since. He wandered through Germany, Italy, Switzerland and finally reached Russia, which pleased him more than any other country.

So completely did Thurburn absorb Russian art and ideas that he is now considered more than half Russian. It is in his Russian training that we may find the secret of his mystic symbols and conceptions, which seem Oriental and yet are unlike anything we know of the Orient. Then again in the sadness and fatalism of his work we see the Russian influence.

Thurburn is an artist in whom sensuality predominates over the intellectual, and yet it is a sensuality that is exquisitely refined and artistic. How true this is may be seen from the fascinating drawing called "Eleonora," shown on this page, the picture of the countess-lover who awoke to the knowledge of love in the Valley of Many-Colored Grasses. Then, again, how deep is the gloom of "Morella," where the lover brings the body of his second love in that mysterious boat to lay her in the tomb by the mirror-like waters from which the body of his first love has vanished.

Thurburn is now living in a ruled monastery in Dalmatia, that picturesque Balkan country where the people are half savages, but live amid the ruins of an ancient civilization. While London now applauds him, Thurburn has nothing but contempt for its thoughts and fashions, for he has found surroundings that please his soul. Nevertheless, London will go on and hold an exhibition of Thurburn's work.

Disheartening Finish of Another 'Millionaire Kid'

NEW YORK'S Great White Way is mourning the passing of another of its spenders. It made famous. This time it is Byron L. Chandler, one of the most notorious of them all. He has met the same fate.

New York's Great White Way is mourning because it feels chastened. It has been taken in—suffering by the hands of a man who got a big white wash for a brief while, earned a fortune, and then came back to the city, a spendthrift, and then blew up the money in a few months, whether it does not sell itself a little more cheap.

The case of Byron Chandler is typical.

This young "millionaire" was the son of a New Hampshire banker. He finished his course at Harvard and then started to cash himself as a Broadway spender. All he ever attempted to do was a milk-manna, and in a very short while he acquired that Broadway dubbed him the "Millionaire Kid."

Now after a few years' notoriety, young Chandler has gone the way of all spenders, and has wound up his glittering career by joining the Alimony Brigade. He has been divorced to pay Grace La Rue, the actress, whom he married, $30 a week for five years and $500 counsel fees to enable her to press the suit which she has brought against him for a separation.

The "Great White Way" is beginning to wonder if there is ever anything to be made of the "Millionaire Kid," and is deploring the publicity he gave him. Flourishing as it does upon a sucker, the Great White Way hates, above all things, to be treated as a sucker, and these millionaire kids who blow up after a brief flash are beginning to get on its nerves.

Finally, of course, the outcome is the Chandler case is the inevitable climax of every such career. The spender, after the first few months of the Great White Way, finds it is not so easy to get ahead.

How Byron Chandler Earned His Reputation

SON of a New Hampshire banker, went from Harvard ten years ago for a gay time in Paris—cost, $30,000 in a few months.

Left a fortune by his grandfather, began his Broadway, New York career as the "Millionaire Kid"—champion spender of the "Gay White Way."

Sued for $25,000 by the mother of Miss Alice Booth, of his New Hampshire home town.

Sued for $100,000 by Joan Sawyer actress—charge breach of promise of marriage. Already married to Grace Stecher.

Divorced by Grace Stecher-Chandler—reported married to Grace La Rue.

Reported killed in an automobile accident in France.

Always in the front row when Grace La Rue sang in the "Follies of 1908."

Married to Grace La Rue, divorced wife of Charles H. Burke, an actor.

Gone to England and set up as coaching rival of Alfred Van derbilt—beats his London-Brighton record.

Fined for attempt to import a $5,000 Japanese dog into England without a permit.

Left in London by Grace La Rue, who says he is "not an ideal husband."

His wife causes his arrest so he won't run away while she sues for divorce.

Divorced—millions vanished—supported by his mother, including counsel fees and $50 per week alimony.

Ex-Millionaire Kid.

that its victims who spend the most the shortest time.

The clown girls and actresses who shine for a brief while in the reflected light of these young spenders might take these facts to heart too. So many of them have leaped to their cost that the candle which burns the brightest is consumed the fastest, that one would think that the glided youth who is a millionaire in a few months would have to travel a long way to get a new one.

Perhaps the most conspicuous case of the kind was that of young Raymond Belmont, son of August Belmont, who earned a more or less "respected" name as a spender along the Great White Way, married Ethel Lorraine, the actress, ran into a snag when parental objections arose, was sued for a separation and is now paying alimony.

More spectacular was the history of young Roy Pierce, son of Henry Clay Pierce, the millionaire petroleum king. Young Pierce cut a big figure along the Great White Way for a while. Then he married Betty Chapman, of whom his father didn't approve, and supplies were cut off. The "Great White Way" anked because the spending ceased. Mrs. Pierce suffered because the marriage was annulled, and the prestige of the "spender" in general suffered, because once again Broadway's faith in the spender was shattered.

Haley Corwin, the Brooklyn bettor, who married the beautiful Roberta Nerpe and squandered several successive fortunes within a year or two on Broadway, was another example of the spender who doesn't stop. In a few years he was reduced to comparative poverty, being compelled to take a fifteen-dollar-a-week position as a typewriter in a morning picture show.

Then there was Tommy Franklin Mantle, Jr., son of another millionaire, who hit the high places along Broadway and married a show girl named Florence Huber. Every kind of influence was brought to bear on the young fellow to renounce his actress wife. But Mantle refused the young woman five thousand dollars to retire gracefully from the scene, but the girl was indignantly rejected. Then annulment proceedings followed.

As far as the Great White Way is concerned, however, the history of all these cases is the same. Whether the marriage contracted by the spender is annulled or not, or separation or divorce follows for lack of pecuniary support, the fact remains that the spender's career on Broadway ends. Sometimes Broadway itself blows the young fellow down. Sometimes he is blown out at the source by use of an invective phrase. However it happens, Broadway is by no means so ready to spenders don't stop, and the passing of Byron Chandler, the "Millionaire Kid," has brought home the realization very emphatically.

When the spender's mother it now transpires, she has been allowing her son to go on. This allowance, she insists, she might stop at any time. Her son had borrowed $25,000 from her in addition, she claims, which he had used in starting his wife, but more significant than all, is the statement that the "millions" which young Byron Chandler is credited with having lavished on Broadway comprised $25,000 which he received from his grandmother's estate and $3,000 which he got from his father's estate.

If a young fellow can become a "Millionaire Kid" on $28,000, what distinction is there left for a real spender? That's what Broadway is asking itself these dog days.

Why You Should Not Obey Your Baby

MANY persons who are dominating and insistent on having their own way were trained as babies in these disagreeable traits.

An infant is generally a centre of attraction in a family. This is especially true among the well-to-do and the rich, where only one or two babies in a household is the rule.

The fact that among the wealthy and those whose time is devoted to social and sporting interests, the baby is doted on and amused by paid nurses instead of the mother, is the principal cause for its arrogance, selfishness, and expectation of obedience from others as it grows to adult age.

To keep the baby amused, to obey its slightest whim, to permit it to have its own way in all things, right or wrong, is the safest way for the nurse, and no less so for the parents. When the infant is treated as a mother, the family circle, or to be abused by friends, its spoils, signals, its series of demands, are immediately complied with—it is an infant autocrat.

The brain cells are at this early age capable of great receptivity. The fibres connecting the various brain centres are sensitive to the kind of messages sent over them. They will accept wrong impressions as quickly as right ones. Hence, if trained to demand without considering the rights of others, the child grows up to be a selfish, unfeeling, and incapable of controlling desires, whims and impulses, as an adult such a person really does not comprehend why he or she is disliked, why quarrels ensue, why those who will not obey their slightest demands appear rude, vulgar and of another class.

It is the child who shows he is made of clay; but the mother or nurse, but it is generally the baby who does all the molding about. Through a few years of this unbridled expression of demands, the child grows up to be a selfish, unfeeling, and incapable of controlling desires, whims and impulses, as an adult such a person really does not comprehend why he or she is disliked, why quarrels ensue, why those who will not obey their slightest demands appear rude, vulgar and of another class.

Hence we have a steady increase of the arrogant, domineering person who will not be denied, and if so turns his hands against his fellow men who self-respecting, working, insists upon maintaining his personal right must and will have his own way, will either make an obedient slave or a tyrant. A girl brought up to have every pet or cry mean that she must and will have her own way, will either make an obedient slave or a tyrant. A girl brought up to have every pet or cry mean that she must and will have her own way, will either make an obedient slave or a tyrant.

Birth and inherited wealth do not necessarily destroy the feeling for a full appreciation of the rights of others, but, breeding the complacent to the will of the baby, obeying every signal, cry and explosion of temper, does make for those antiaocial persons, the arrogant and demanding woman and the man who cannot control his evil impulses.

Things Not Found in Any Backs

Making It EASIER TO PLAY the VIOLIN and PIANO

TWO little devices have been invented which make it comparatively simple to play both the violin and the piano, and at the same time relieve the neighbors of a budding musician from much discomfort. Everybody who thinks about playing the violin for the first time realizes the difficulty of striking the right note. There are no fixed points on the strings where they must be touched. Only long practice can enable the pupil to put his fingers on the right places. Thus the early stages of violin study are particularly trying for the student, and still more so for the neighbors who are condemned to listen to him.

The distinguished violinist and composer, Frank Chossy, founder of the noted popular schools of music at Lausanne, Switzerland, has invented a device for the study of the violin and piano which guides their fingers and gives them the accuracy of fingering which is so rarely attained. This arrangement is called in French the "Joujoute," which means the "right player."

SUMMER Best for CONSUMPTIVES

THEIR is no more a popular belief that a consumptive person feels better and is really in better health in the summer months than at other times of the year. Until recently, however, physicians have been pointed this idea, saying that it had no basis other than the fact that coughs and colds, which affect the tubercle, do not so adversely, are less frequent in summer.

In the, as in many other things it now turns out that popular belief was right and Dr. Science agrees. Recent investigations by Dr. Strandgaard, an eminent Danish physician, show that entirely apart from the fewer coughs and colds in warm weather the summer months are undoubtedly the most favorable to the consumptive.

In the Danish sanatoriums for the treatment of tuberculosis it is the practice for patients to be weighed every Saturday morning. The average weekly gain in weight for 800 patients during a period of ten years is from six to nine ounces.

But, as Dr. Strandgaard points out, this gain varies greatly, according to the season of the year. From October to May it is fairly uniform but less than six and one-half to seven and one-half ounces. It rises rapidly and steadily from May until September and during the latter month it reaches its maximum for the year, of eleven and one-half ounces. It falls from October to December, which is the month showing the smallest increase in weight.

The average gain of weight in September is almost double that in December and there can be little doubt that this gain is, as a rule, accompanied by a marked improvement in the patient's health.

In one of the Danish sanatoriums the number of patients who died in the winter beds is about twice as great as in the summer months. The proportion of patients under expectation and bacilli is greatest in August and September and least from January to April.

All the observations of this Danish physician tend to show that when the weather is warm and sunny with a high degree of humidity in the air the consumptive shows the greatest gain in weight and the greatest improvement in other ways.

New Devices Which Help the Beginner to STRIKE THE RIGHT NOTES

A PORTION OF PROFESSOR CHOISY'S SIMPLIFIED KEYBOARD WHICH HELPS THE BEGINNER TO FIND THE PROPER KEY.

It is simply a sheet of paper with marks indicating the exact points on the strings which correspond to the different notes. The pupil has only to place his fingers on these marks to produce the desired notes with accuracy. This would be impossible without this arrangement at the beginning of his studies. With this little card all unnecessary disappairs and the fingers acquire from the beginning a habit of accuracy which greatly facilitates mastery of the instrument.

The pupil, moreover, with this card can practice putting his fingers in the right place without the assistance of a teacher. The finger practice with the left hand should be carried on in the same way as the right hand. The pupil places the violin in the right position against the shoulder and places the play of his fingers on the card. He calls out the notes as he does so, keeps his fingers in the proper position and can be carried without growing weary with this instrument.

Professor Choisy has invented another arrangement which is equally simple and very easy. The student is asked to play the second device, does not pretend to replace the piano. It enables the pupil to go through an important part of piano study, however, without the instrument, and to acquire a

The arrangement is extremely simple. It is a card on which the keys are printed of the same size and arrangement as the piano keys. This card is placed next to the piano. The keys of the piano are printed on the card. When the pupil looks at the simplified keyboard and immediately sees the note he wants. To make the pupil to practice all alone without the possibility of mistakes. As the pupil familiarizes himself with the different notes the teacher can gradually suppress the simplified keyboard until the pupil can do without it altogether.

The simplified keyboard has been supplemented by an exercise book, named by another of his teachers, Mme. S. Collin, of New-Castle. This consists of a book containing a set of cards the same size as the piano keys. On each card a certain musical note is written with the five lines of the staff and a key marked from above and below it. The pupil can immediately find the corresponding key on the piano and refer to the "simplified keyboard" to see if he is correct. This is an excellent exercise, and the only one currently required to read musical notation. Both arrangements have been tried out with excellent results.

"A strip of paper with marks showing the exact points on the strings, which correspond to the different notes, is fastened underneath the strings of the violin."

How JUNK Is Turned Into COPPER

SCIENTISTS and business men are both beginning to understand that it is really their duty to do something as waste and refuse. The existence of what we call waste or refuse is merely to our failure to find a proper method of turning it into dollars and cents.

An interesting example of this fact is the recent discovery in Butte that the water pumped from the copper mines can be turned into an excellent fertilizer. The water, so heavily charged with mineral as to be undrinkable, was formerly allowed to run down a gulch, which, according to the custom of mine camps was the dumping place for old stoves, tin cans and all the refuse of the camp. The water, however, after being pumped up a can that had been in the water for some time and was supposed to find that it had turned into copper, and of exceptional purity at that. He secured a lot of the refined metal and had it converted into a plant, which brought him rich returns. The mining company has now built a large plant to secure this product. The process is known as replacement, and consists of minute particles of iron being removed by the copper charged water. A particle of copper replaces it. The general's age of the object is related.

Man's God

WHAT
LAW

What Is Your Idea of God?
Each Tribe and Each Nation in the History of the Race Has Its Own God, Reflecting Usually the Nature of the Man Believing in the God.
The God Moloch Was Supposed to Devour Young Children Sacrificed to Him.
A Higher Religion Says of the Children, "Suffer the Little Children to Come Unto Me, and Forbid Them Not; for of Such is the Kingdom of God."
From Burning Children in the Name of Religion to Saving and Protecting Them in the Name of Religion is Great Progress. What Next?

"For we are but of yesterday, and know nothing, because our days upon earth are a shadow."
 —Job 8. 9.

Of all the animals living on this planet, man alone walks erect, turns his eyes to the heavens, where he hears the thunder, sees the lightning and the sun and stars—and looks for God to answer his questions.

For five hundred thousand years' men more or less like ourselves have lived on this earth.

From the beginning they have asked themselves, "Why am I here? Where am I going? What power created me? What is the power that destroys me?"

The various kinds of gods that men have invented, believed in and worshipped represent so many different attempts to answer the question, "What am I, why am I, who made me?" It is interesting for each human being while believing devoutly in his own god, if he has one, putting that god in a separate class, above all other forces, to consider the beliefs and the gods of many kinds that represent the combined faith and brutality of different periods and races.

On this page we print a picture of two gods, one a hideous ancient idol, the other the high God believed in by the Jewish race, and believed in, in more or less modified form, by a majority of the civilized nations today. Consider first the fearful god of the Ammonites and of other ancient idolatrous tribes.

A picture of that god or idol receiving in sacrifice a living child is printed on this page. It is impossible for us to believe that human beings ever bowed down to such a horrible creature and believed that an all-powerful being craved the sacrifice of innocent lives and delighted in torture.

You see what this dreadful god was. He represented, by the way, a degraded, degenerate religion. His was a degradation of sun worship.

He was made of brass with the head of a bull. In his breast was an opening through which the little sacrifices were thrust and fell into a fiery furnace.

In some instances the arms of the idol, cunningly manipulated by hidden pagan priests, seemed to seize the living victim and draw it back into the fire, as though the god himself were devouring living flesh.

As late as the year fourteen of our era, sacrifices were offered to this god Moloch at Carthage. They were suppressed by the Emperor Tiberius.

The priests of the idol, following the habit of controlling and governing human beings through superstitious fear, exercised a fearful power as agents of Moloch.

For they could select the sacrifices, say whose child should be offered up. Woe to the enemies of the priests of Moloch!

Another picture on this page shows an interesting, simple-minded German artist's conception of the God that the world looks up to today. Underneath is written the text, "And the evening and the morning were the sixth day."

"Thus the heavens and the earth were finished, and all the host of them."

"And on the seventh day God ended His work which He had made, and He rested on the seventh day from all His work which He had made."

This God, shaped like a man, but much bigger and greater, with hair and feet and hands, using the earth as a footstool and constantly praised by the angels through all eternity, is the ancient Jewish God, adapted with slight modifications and by theological discussion in our own time.

We look with horror upon the picture that shows a god in whose praise human beings are burned alive.

Yet, the majority of the faithful now living believe that the Ruler of this universe does to millions of human beings after death AND THROUGH ALL ETERNITY what the priests of Moloch did to a few.

The sufferings of Moloch's victims ended in a few minutes in the heat. The dreadful sufferings with which Luther and Calvin and other Christian teachers delighted last forever, "Their worm dieth not."

We see that man's idea of God represents man himself, his brutality, his limited kindness, his primitive, childish sense of justice.

We could not possibly tolerate now the burning alive of human beings by the priests of Moloch.

But the great majority of civilized men, doubtful themselves perhaps, teach their children that a God ruling above inflicts upon creatures that He has created, helpless beings that are the direct results of His will and of His own act, ATROCIOUS SUFFERINGS THAT NEVER CAN END.

Two pictures are on this page and one question mark.

That question mark represents Man's idea of God in the future.

What will that idea be?

What is your own idea of the power that holds the sun and the planets balanced in their places, that can "bind the sweet influences of Pleiades, or loose the bands of Orion," or "bring forth Massaroth in his season," or "guide Arcturus with his sons?"

Man is crushed with the thought of his own littleness and weakness. That is especially true of primitive man who thought every cave inhabited by a devil, believed that the winds were spirits, and that a god threw the lightning bolt when it struck.

Today, with his telescope revealing the infinite, his microscope, and chemistry that divides the atom, man's intellectual courage is greater and his idea of God greater in proportion.

In the wonderful and beautiful book of Job, you see the words quoted at the beginning of this article.

Those few words express the mental attitude of primitive man, and the humble intellectual attitude of the most learned men of today.

We are indeed "but of yesterday, and know nothing."

And "our days upon earth ARE a shadow." We come and we go, millions come after us as thousands of millions have gone before.

What is the power that keeps the earth in its place, the sun shining, the comets in their journeys, the whole marvellous machinery of space and time moving without flaw as we appear and vanish?

The first man asked himself the great question, "What am I and why?" Man asks himself that question today, after conquering this earth and its forces and making them his own—and his answer is as childish and hopeless as that of the first man that shivered at the lightning's flash.

Happy those that have found a faith to satisfy them!

No wonder men cling to their faith, fight for it and die for it!

No wonder the representatives of "God" are powerful, whether they be the priests of Moloch burning their victims today before the eyes of the worshipper, or the priests of another god threatening with hell fire to come later!

What will the God of the future be, in the millions of years that are ahead of us, when the most ignorant man will know ten thousand times more than any man now living, when the children will be born learned in the knowledge of men, as the young animals are born learned in the knowledge of animals?

One thing we know as we look at the question mark and ask ourselves, "What is God?" We know that to the mind of man the word "God" means power.

We know that Power rules the universe and THAT IT IS JUST.

Four hundred years before the birth of Christ men had begun to reject the savage idea of a barbarous, cruel, revengeful God. Plato, the great philosopher, said—we quote Jowett's "Analysis of the Republic":

"Our first principle is, that God must be represented as He is; not as the author of all things, but of good only. We will not suffer the poets to say that He is the steward of good and evil, or that He has two caeks full of destinies—or that Athene and Zeus incited Pandarus to break the treaty; or that God caused the sufferings of Niobe, or of Pelops, or the Trojan war; or that he makes men sin when He wishes to destroy them."

A great philosopher—lover of wisdom—was Plato. His wisdom was shown in his high idea of God, in a day when other men believed in an army of gods, one more vicious than the other.

"This is our first and great principle—God is the author of good only."

Man feels the need of a belief in a great and just power. What that belief is may not tell us about God, but it tells us a great deal about the man. A man is what he believes.

Well might the French philosopher say, "If there had not been a God, it would have been necessary to invent one."

If you can describe your idea of eternal justice, you can describe yourself.

Two great questions, and only two, filled the minds of men for ages, and they fill men's minds still:

What is God?
 What am I?

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS

Restored consciousness by Harry and Pauline, the kid man believes it to be a dream until later he finds the identical bracelet on the mummy's skeleton wrist. He promises Pauline one year to see life, and places her in the guardianship of Owen. A real heart attack gives him just time to tell her to live and to love. He dies in a brief will. Then he dies. A lawyer tells Owen that he would have permanent charge of Pauline's estate if something should happen to him. Owen, who is a former railroad man, and Owen, conspires to kill Pauline. The preceding chapters have dealt with the many efforts of the two to accomplish their ends.

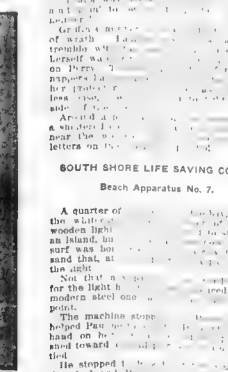

In Pauline's latest adventure she casts her lot with amuglers under the domination of the plotters. The installment that follows

200-Room Mansion Put in Readiness for Brilliant Rice-Ayer Wedding

The marriage on August 2 of Miss Ethel Rice and Frederick Ayer, Jr. bids fair to be one of the most brilliant of the season.

The Rice mansion at Ipswich, where the reception is to take place with its 200 rooms and its interesting setting—the extensive acres around the house—make it one of the new places of the North Shore and admirably suited for an occasion of this kind.

The family has already chartered a special train and numerous automobiles to convey the invited guests to the scene of the wedding festivities.

There will be a decidedly interesting hunting atmosphere about the affair, as Miss Rice is one of the most expert huntswomen of the North Shore. She does all the polo stunts as cleverly as her brothers, with whom she has been a great comrade in all their outdoor life. She has inherited her love of horses, the hunt and the chase from her mother, who is a real huntswoman. Out from her grandfather, N. V. Rice of Boston, who once owned a string of thirty high bred for riding. "Leading Lady," his great show horse is still at his beautiful stable at Beverly Cove.

Miss Rice's maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Proctor, are also notable members of the hunting set. Mr. Proctor is the President of the New England Hunt Club, and Mrs. Proctor is the President of the Hunt Club of the North Shore.

The Rice estate is known as "Farrow Hill."

Mr. Ayer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Ayer of Commonwealth Avenue and Fifth Crossing. His sisters are Mrs. George S. Patton, of Washington, who has just come on for the wedding, and Miss Katherine Ayer, who was a debutante of a couple of winters ago.

BRIDES OF THE NORTH SHORE

By an Old Newporter

A black and white, rather boring picture reel was noted in front of the Newport yesterday when it was full of life and action with a few nado of clothes like Gaby's.

The scene opens with the arrival of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, owner of the Breakers, looking well but serious.

Mr. and Mrs. August Belmont (Eleanor Hobson) pass in their suite with two hired automobiles.

Then comes Mr. and Mrs. Henry Barton Jacobs. Mrs. Jacobs was the wife of Robert Garrett of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad as her first marriage.

Then appears Mr. and Mrs. Spencer, Jr. (Mary Sands), in white, and Miss Anna Sands in a red and white automobile.

Miss Freda Paine and Miss Katherine Lawrence hurry up with Mrs. John C. Fairchild of Boston in their train. Mrs. Fairchild jumps out and hurries in to her art gallery on the Casino grounds. With that English walking stick and other ultra social equipments, you have to go some to keep up with Mrs. Paine.

Mr. and Mrs. Fiedrich and Mrs. Katherine Youker are in the crowd.

Mrs. John C. Fairchild is in a green coat and a sweet smile looks as though the fact of her being a widow is not much to her. Mrs. George B. Widener, a Titanic survivor, still in black, passes up its much solemnity. Mrs. Widener is greeting a villa down the avenue that is costing more than a million of dollars.

Now look at Mrs. Andrew Cheves Dulles, her daughter, now the wife of Ettore Romano Fontana. Mrs. Dulles is never seen at the Casino, where a crowd is too frivolous for them.

Stuyvesant Fish, the one-time president of the Union Central Railroad, is in sight, escorting Madame Fish, the wife of the U. S. Ambassador, in a leading a pet cat to a silver leash.

Mrs. R. L. Beckman arrives looking nice and hopes her husband may be the next Governor of Rhode Island.

Mrs. William Payne Thompson (Edith Bilet) drives out in state with a sleeping pair.

John Hurl von Lersner hurries in to see the czar's representative, the tsar.

Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, wife of the district attorney of New York, seems to have fallen in with the social set without any trouble.

Mr. and Mrs. Royal Phelps Carroll (Marion Langdon), the Baltimore belle, appear, devoted as ever.

Some one asks who are the two pretty girls with the Grosvenors? Why, they are the Misses Maria and Mary Scales of Pawtucket, which place they are putting on the social map.

Mrs. French Vanderbilt never looked more charming.

George Henry Warren, Jr., comes along in an ink-bottle stock, looking like his sister Constance, now the Countess Guy de Lasteyrie.

Mrs. Jane Fish, always a charming personality, is in dress parade.

But look at "Larry" Waterbury and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., in a dotted muslin confection.

Mrs. W. Gossely Low lights from her limousine, but not before casting at herself in a little mirror.

Mrs. E. Hayward Perry is smart in red, and Mrs. Walter S. Andrews, in a blue sweater and with her hands full, looks very attractive.

Mrs. Mauden J. Perry wears an elegant gown, and Mrs. Hermann Oelrich, driving her own car, is in blue.

Mrs. W. Watts Sherman is quietly but expensively adorned.

Mrs. Howard Cushing, in a yellow automobile coat, looks distinguished as usual.

Miss Madeleine O'Brien, daughter of former Justice Morran J. O'Brien, and Miss Marion Collins, daughter of H. B. Collins, with Mrs. "Bessie" Vanderbilt, present an animated picture.

By no means least comes Lady Catherine Forbes of England, who is spending the summer at Belmont's Inn at Newport.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodbury Blair of Washington should be mentioned. Mr. Blair maintains a telephone service in his touring car, which is a great convenience to the chauffeur.

And here come that delightful little personage, Mrs. J. Fred Pierson, Jr. (Suzanne Miller), who has three of the prettiest children in Newport.

Francis A. Shea of Commonwealth Avenue escorts his sister, Mrs. J. B. Thomas of Boston.

Miss Annie Lyman of Walnut street, Boston, cuts some figure driving the only hansom trap in Newport, with the only horse that carries a sleigh bell at the bottom of his collar.

Then one recognizes Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames, one of the famous Cryder girls, and her sister, Mrs. William Woodward (Clara Cryder), who are still as two peas.

An old Charles Edward Woodcock, D. D., of Kentucky, arrives at the Casino with Bishop and Mrs. James Henry Darrington of Harrisburg, the orchestra, Henri Conrad leader, breaks into "My Old Kentucky Home," which Bishop Woodcock shows 'em how to sing.

Margery Lee Chooses September 26 for Wedding

There has been much speculation as to just how long an engagement Miss Margery Lee's to Francis W. Sargent would be, and now to the joy of their many young friends, who had hoped it would be a short one, comes the announcement that the wedding is to take place on Saturday, September 28.

Miss Lee is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Lee of Brookline and Beverly.

Miss Lee's two older sisters, Mrs. Oliver Turner and Mrs. Harry Pratt McKean, Jr., were both brides of June a little over a year ago.

Mr. Sargent is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Sargent of Boston, and both young people are representative of the best in Boston's blue blood families. Miss Lee has an unmarried sister, Miss Florence Lee, and a brother, Harry Lee.

Miss Lee was a debutante of a couple of seasons ago, and is a well-known member of the Vincent Club.

Mr. Sargent is a member of the Harvard class of 1907, and upon finishing his academic course he made a tour of the world with L. Tucker, Jr. He is a member of the Somerset, Tennis and Racquet, the Country Hunt and Beverly Yacht Clubs and Boston Athletic Association.

Mr. Sargent's sisters are Mrs. David Cheever (Jane Sargent) and Mrs. John Sargent (Mary Sargent).

Stork Visits 'Groton House' With Daughter for Winthrop

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Winthrop (nee Sarah B. Thayer of Boston) on the morning of July 23. This is the second child to arrive at "Groton House" since Miss Thayer became Mrs. Winthrop. There are three stepchildren at "Groton House" which the present Mrs. Winthrop is affectionately rearing in the noteworthy happy married life of the Winthrops.

North Shore Dull for Diplomatic Colony

The absence of Miss Duma while at her Roman studio, was that Duma, wife of the Austro-Hungarian ambassador, taking home to her Roman studio "at home" cause the social and diplomatic circle at brought together a distinguished and brilliant circle of people.

The extent of Mrs. Duma's work in from the time she returned to the North Shore has been among Rome is indicative of her genius and her interest in her art.

Mrs. Duma has been in Rome all the summer, looking very well and very happy. She has been in Rome all the summer, looking very well and very happy. She has been in Rome all the summer, looking very well and very happy.

Among the season's brides of this North Shore Summer colony is Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, who was Miss Julia Harwood in business in Boston. Mrs. Hoyt is in business in Boston. Mrs. Hoyt is in business in Boston.

Mrs. Hoyt is the daughter of Julian Robbins. Of much interest is the fact that she was married in the wonderful trailing gown in which she was formally presented at the Court of St. James while a debutante. With her of Easter lilies, which harmonized with the silver embroidery of gown and the almost transparent train of cloth of silver, her features on her wedding day were a little seen among the fashionable throng present. Mrs. Hoyt is a sister of the Beverly Summer set, and has been in the society at Marblehead just now in Mrs. Herbert E. Harwood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Blanchard of Massachusetts road, Concord, and with a Summer place at Marblehead.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Harwood, of Newton Centre, who with their family are at "Blakers" Point, N.Y., may spend a portion of the season at Marblehead, where the latter party, Mrs. B. House of New York, was entertained at the Hotel Delphique for the season. Mrs. Harwood, who before her second marriage was Mrs. Alice Roberts of this city, has hosts of friends here. Her mother-in-law has her first visit here, Harry A. Jackson, and Mrs. Roberts left the early part of the week for a trip in their motor to the many points of interest on Cape Cod, making the Hotel Delphique at West Marsh their objective point.
